

"Surrendering the NHS"

Dr Steven White of Barnet, wrote to The Times on 5th July 2006 about facts which seem to have been too startling to evoke much reasoned response. He said...."Your report (June 30) that the Government is quietly trying to hand over effective control of the primary care trusts (PCTs) to international private health companies without discussion or parliamentary debate is chilling. Since PCTs control most of the NHS budget and commission care, the fate of every hospital in the country will pass into the hands of overseas private companies.....

Dr Stevens believes that by the time the devastating effects of this become evident to the general public, it will be far too late to reverse the process.